About once in a generation appears a book that is at once and universally accepted as a marked element in the life and literature of the world. Such : work, at the close of the seventeenth century, was Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress," one of the best-known books of human origin. In the eighteenth centalent but little genius, De Foe's esting. "Strange Adventures of Robinson Crusoe," startled the reading public with a narrative so apparently real that it was received with intense enthusiasm as truth, and for a hundred and fifty years | the nomination of John W. Currier for | would equal about one half the loss .has remained one of the leading classics. In our own more fertile age, Walter Scott's "Waverly" first burst the bonds of stilted fiction and created the historical novel; about thirty years later Mrs. Stowe's "Uncle Tom's Cabin" aroused the world with indignation over the wrongs of a race, and inaugurated the novel with a purpose. And now, thirty years later, appears another book, "A Fool's Errand, by One of the Fools," which has seized upon the popular imagination and run through edition after edition, as fast as it could be printed. It is the marked book of this generation. We have a copy of this book in our office, and consider it well worth the price asked for it, and a book that should be read by every person. SPEECH OF VICE-PRESIDENT WHEELER.

We all know that Vice-President Wheeler is an able and eloquent man, but few suspect, what is really the fact, that he is a humorist. At his speech in St. Albans, after keeping his auditors in laughter by his witticisms, he touched upon national issues thus:

Republicans of Vermont, this is the old conflict between the old parties, with this one variation-the Democratic party has dressed up in blue clothes, borrowed for the occasion. Gen. Hancock, who hurled shot and shell at the Democratic party when it sought the life of the Nation on the flery heights of Gettysburg, now leads that party in its assault upon the ballot box, through which it proposes to control the Government it could not destroy. And Quite a frost Monday morning the this party which in National convention at Chicago, a month after the turn of the tide at Gettysburg, denounced the war as a failure, and said it ought to cease and which, during the war, made no concealment of its joy at every disaster to the Union arms, now rends the air with its shouts for the man who aided in putting a stunner! down their rebellion. Oh! could these shouts have followed the victory at Gettysburg, how grateful would they have been in the ears of our brave, scar-worn, weary armies. They would, as many a southern man has told me, have ended that war nearly a year sooner. My friends, there is a great mistake somewhere: and you, Yankees, who are in the habit of looking close, will find no difficulty in dis-Mr. Charles A. Stanley has bought a covering the old Democratic cat under all this pretentious meal.

God forbid that I say aught in unjust derogation of the gallant soldier, now the nominee of the Democratic party, who, when the foundations of the Government were rocking in the wild tempest of the rebellion, when war ploughed its channels deep in our lives, our homes and our hearts, and hung its black banner over our hearth-stones, soiled with the slaughter of our loved ones; God forbid, I restock as well as the furniture of the peat, that I say aught in unjust derogation of the gallant soldier who followed the starry banner through that long, weary struggle for the Nation's life and sealed his devotion to the Union of our fathers prospect of any change until we have with the impress of his own blood. But as the stream cannot rise higher than its fountain, so no President ever did or ever can rise above his party. And the man who seeks its suffrages and accepts its positions of trust is bound by every consideration to carry out its views and ORLEANS COUNTY MONITOR, which is a sufficient guarantee that the principles. The fountain of power in the Democratic party is in the 138 votes is to 47, so is the controlling power in the Democratic party, as between the North and South. In all your corporations, manufacturing and financial, a majority of the stock control. That, in the event of success, the South will control the Democratic party absolutely, results as well mathematically as from its conduct before the war, when it dominated the Government in every department, as Mr. It is reported that Mr. Jenkins had Stephens proved conclusively in his The Democrats are enthusiastic over $1,000 insurance on the buildings, which speech at Milledgeville, as a reason why Georgia had nothing to gain by secession. No, Republicans of Vermont, the issue has not changed. The question which confronts us is, What shall be the makeup, character, political and moral, and real purposes of the party which shall control the Government of this country for the coming four years? Shall it be the Democratic party, whose citadel of power is manned by those who barely fifteen years ago were clutching at the Nation's life, saying "One of us must lar Government: bred in hatred of New England and the Union; which defended to the last the barbarism of slavery and which, down to this hour, protests against every act of the National Government in Clear, Ex., the South except the distribution of its Ress, Hams, Smoked, Will you permit this unregenerate Southern Democratic party vet tainted with the aristocratic caste of slavery, State rights and shameless repudiation; and revenges growing out of their fruitless attempt to overthrow the Governassume power in this country?

Or do you still cling to the Republican freedom, progress, education and equality before the law? I know well your answer. You will follow the banner borne by Garfield and Arthur resplendent with such triumphs as were never inscribed on other earthly oanner. I have known Gen. Garfield intimately for the last decade. In daily association with him for years, upon one of the leading committees of the House of Representatives and the walks of private life, I know well the ins and outs of his character. His broad, manly, generous, honest nature lifts him to a plane far above the arts of the knave or demagogue. Like Pope's Man of Ross, he is

"Statesman, yet friend to truth, of soul sincere, In action faithful and in honor clear." Without the early aids of wealth or station, by the innate forces of his intellect and manliness he has propelled himself to his present high position, never losing his sympathy with the masses of his countrymen in their struggles for the blessings which this good government of ours holds out to all who diligently and honestly seek them, and to this great hearted sympathy the heart of this Nation is now responding in full measure, and in November next, we will furnish General Garfield, the scholar, the soldier, and the statesman, with such a patent of nobility as none but millions of kings acting in concert at the ballot box can confer. 1 know equally well Gen. Arthur. In fidelity to the principles of the Republican party and in action to maintain them he is the peer of any man in the party. In executive ability he equals. Differing with the President upon modes of administration, that high official never by implecation reflected upon his personal integrity. Gen. Arthur is entitled to the hearty support of every Republican in the country, and I only wish the position which he is to occupy in the Government was more commensurate with his ability and capacity for high usefulness. On the night of the first Tuesday of September next, on the other side of the lake we shall look for "the star that never sets" a little higher up in the political heavens

A SAD CASE .- A very queer and unaccountable circumstance occurred in the family of John F. Clark, who lives in the western part of Newbury. Saturday last his wife and daughter left home and went to John Smith's and wanted to borrow some money of him and have him take them to the railroad station. They roported that some one had been trying to poison them at their home-had sprinkled a white powder about the house, and put some liquid and that in consequence they were una- day of September, A. Mr. Smith very soon became convinced that both mother and daughter were insane. The women stayed at Smith's that night, and the next morning started off on foot but were overtaken and brought back. Mr. Smith and Mr. Clark had to take the daughter by force and put her in the wagon, and they were taken home. The fact of both the mother and daughter becoming insane at the same time is a remarkable, as well as a very sad circumstance.—Bradford Opinion,

"Man wants but little," &c.

'Man wants but little here below,' Was written by Goldsmith,-Although heldon't exactly prove To us the truth of this.

"Man wants but little here," he says The man, O where is he? He first "stood on the burning deck," And then was drowned at sea.

And he that "wants but little here," Has never since been found, I 'spose he was devoured by sharks The minute he was drowned.

And now I'll put Goldsmith away Upon the highest shelf. And take another poem down,-"You know how 'tis yourself."

John Quincy Adams was a man As good as Goldsmith was, And this, if I remember right, Is what John Quincy says:

"My wants are many, and, if told Would muster many a score; And were each wish a mint of gold, I still should want for more."

There, that's the sort of talk for me; It smacks of human nature, About as I have found it out From printer up to Preacher.

My wants are many,"-if there's a That hasn't said the same, He must be heir to all the ills

Of halt, and blind and lame.

My wants are many,—now that's me; Please take a high-backed chair And put your feet upon the stove And listen with your ear.

want the man that gets it done To plank me down the cash. want the business people all Should clearly understand

That I do work as well and cheap

want one good job every day,

To earn my honest hash,

As any other man. want to do your printing, sir, If fancy or if plain, And do it prompt as any can,

From Canada to Maine.

All tickets, labels, cards, The speeches of our learned men, The songs of all our bards. want to print all bills and posters,

To paste up everywhere

I want to print all programmes,

And lots of little circulars To scatter at the Fair. (And by the way, I want you at Our County Fair this fall, The crops, they say, are extra good,

You'll want to see them all. The pigs, the lambs, the calves, & colts Are wonderful in size, And chickens, goslings, doves & ducks

Bill Brown has built some covered Upon a pleasant spot,

Where you can sit down if you choose

Will quack to your surprise.

And see the horses trot. The ladies, too, are up to snuff, But know what they're about; They always fill up Floral Hall,-

And squeeze the fellows out.)

But hold on here, I guess you'll think I've off my subject been,-So e-go, presto, presto change, And here we are again: I want some fifty men or more,

want a dozen female girls With kind, heroic hearts; And want enough for all to do From seven o'clock to six; I want them busy setting type

And emptying their sticks.

Of stern and sturdy parts;

I want a great stone office built, (I hardly think I'll get it), want the roof above the clouds, So lightning cannot hit it. I want a gallows made in front,

I want a hundred other things I have 'nt time to name; I cannot have them here below, But want them all the same.

To hang my friends upon,-

For work that I have done.

Those friends, I mean, who never pay

But this's enough to prove to you That I am human, yet, It's natural for human folks To want more 'n they can get.

And now, kind friends, I say adieu, But hope we soon shall meet,-If not, I'll have to drum you more In 'bout another week.
